INTRODUCTION

This volume, in a sense, forms a sequel to Studies in Irian Languages, Part 1, which was published as NUSA Volume 40, 1996. That volume presented grammatical sketches of some languages, a study of tones in Mpur, and an overview of morpho-syntactic features found in the languages of the Bird’s Head peninsula of the eastern-most Indonesian province Irian Jaya, since January 2000 known as Papua. Now that more detailed publications on some languages have become available, it seemed appropriate to present data from all the languages studied, in the form of analyzed and annotated texts. A conversation I had with Dr. Bambang Kaswanti Purwo in October 1999 was instrumental in shaping this volume. We felt that it would be beneficial to both linguists and anthropologists to have a collection of texts from the oral traditions of these languages. Each text is preceded by a short introduction giving some general information about the language. Alternative names, in some cases actually referring to a certain dialect, which have been used in the literature are listed, as well as other publications dealing with the particular language.

The contributions are arranged, roughly, from west to east throughout the Bird’s Head peninsula (see map). The first eight languages are all West-Papuan. That is to say, in earlier classifications most of them were said to belong to the West-Papuan Phylum, to which also the Non-Austronesian languages of North-Halmahera belong, while Hatam was considered a phylum-level isolate. The languages along the south coast, which have Inanwatan as representative, are considered to belong to the Trans-New Guinea Phylum.

To what extent such branching classification for the languages of this area is valid is still a matter for debate and further research. Thus, at this moment I refrain from identifying lower order family classifications, although it is clear that Moi and Tehit in the western Bird’s Head are rather closely related, given the shared feature of ablaut in (some) verb stems indicating plurality. Likewise, the genetic relationship between Meyah and Sougb in the eastern half is evident, given the shared constraint on certain vowels as verb-initial elements. Such definite statements cannot yet be made for the other languages presented in this volume, although general typological similarities are easily seen from the brief introductions and the actual text materials.

One of the main difficulties is that clear correspondences in the various vocabularies are rather sparse. Another problem is presented by the evidence for centuries-old contact between these languages among themselves as well as with linguistic outsiders, so that possible loans are not easily distinguished from genetic remnants. More detailed discussion of these issues can be found in other publications (Reesink 1996, 1998, 2000, De Vries 1998).

One thing that has become clear from the more recent research is that all kinds of features have spread from and to neighboring Austronesian languages. In the texts, the more recent loans from Indonesian (or rather, the local Malay variants) have been marked in bold print, while occasionally footnotes discuss other kinds of possible links.

We have tried as much as possible to use the same glossing conventions for grammatical morphemes, and thus only one list of abbreviations for the whole volume is given.

Some of the contributors have done fieldwork under the auspices of the Dutch NWO priority programme ISIR ("The Irian Jaya Studies: a Programme for Interdisciplinary Research") in cooperation with LIPI (Indonesian Institute of Sciences), under the sponsorship of Dr. Hasan Alwi (Director of Pusat Pembinaan dan Pengembangan Bahasa). Other contributors are members of the Summer of Institute of Linguistics. I would like to thank each of them for their contribution.

My present work as editor has been done as researcher in the Spinoza project "Lexicon and Syntax", under Prof. Pieter Muysken, Leiden University.

Language groups in the Bird's Head of Irian Jaya
MOI

Raymond H. Menick
Leiden University

Moi is spoken by approximately 4000 people (Grimes 1992:578) in the kecamatans (subdistricts) Salawati, Sorong, and Makbon of the kabupaten (regency) Sorong in the West Bird’s Head of Irian Jaya (Silzer and Heikkinen 1991:64). To what extent the Moi language is still spoken on the island of Salawati is not clear. Van der Leeden (1993:11) reports: “The language map of East Salawati is complex because of the influx of several variants of the Moi language from the opposite coast of the Bird’s Head. Moi people have since times immemorial settled on Salawati [....] They still possess traditions which connect them with the continent, but they freely intermarry with the eastern Salawatians. They have become integrated into the latter’s communities and speak Butleh or Kawit.”

The Moi people themselves distinguish two main dialects in their language: Moi asli and Moi Segin. Moi Segin is spoken in the villages Kalasaman, Aimas, Mariat Pantai, Kalamono, Yeflio, Segun and Gisim. Moi asli is spoken in Makbon, Batulobang, Malaumkarta, Asbaken, Dela, Mega, Kalayili and Sayosa.

Moi has fourteen phonemic consonants: voiced and voiceless contrasts at three points of articulation: p, b, t, d, k, g; two nasals: m and n; two fricatives: f and s; two liquids: r and l, and two semi-vowels: w and y. Only the voiceless velar stop k, the two nasals m and n and the trill r can occur in word-final position. The latter phoneme does not occur word-initially.

There are fourteen vowel phonemes in Moi: five short and five long vowels: i, ii, e, ee, a, aa, u, uu, o, oo and four diphthongs: ei, ai, ou, au.

Morphology in Moi is relatively simple. Verbs must take a prefix agreeing in person and number with the subject. Nouns can also take a prefix to indicate possession. Nouns denoting kinship terms and body parts must be prefixed to indicate inalienable possession. The verbal prefixes are identical to the nominal prefixes and the form of this prefix is similar to the form of the free pronoun. In the Moi pronominal system a three way distinction is made in the third person singular: masculine, feminine and non-human. In the third person plural only a distinction is made between human and non-human. Furthermore, inclusive and exclusive forms are distinguished in the first person plural.

A demonstrative is always morphologically complex. The constituents indicate the position in space (optional), distance and number/gender. An example is given in (1).

(1) Aali-ki-ow
    below-FAR-3SM
    He/it down there.

The unmarked structure of a clause is Subject-Verb-Object and of a noun phrase it is Noun-Adjective-Numeral-Demonstrative. A striking characteristic in Moi syntax is the occurrence of sequences of verbs. Prepositional, directional and aspeclual notions are or may be expressed through verbs.

1Research for this article was conducted under the auspices of ISIR (Irian Jaya Studies: a programme for interdisciplinary research, 1993-2000), a priority programme of NWO (Netherlands Organization for Scientific Research) which is financed by WOTRO (Netherlands Foundation for the Advancement of Tropical Research). The programme was carried out in cooperation with LIPI (Lembaga Ilmu Pengetahuan Indonesia). I wish to express my gratitude to Dr Hasan Alwi, head of the Pasat Pembinaan dan Pembangunan Bahasa, for his willingness to be my sponsor.
With regard to prepositional verbs a distinction can be made between same-subject verb sequences and different-subject verb sequences. In a same-subject verb sequence the subject prefix of both the main verb and the prepositional verb refer to the same subject, as in (2).

(2) Eegees Bainkete p-oolom p-au a Madele pu-tuk
   earth Bainkete 3S.NH-sit 3S.NH-at.SG LNK Madele 3S.NH-bay

   The Bainkete area lies at the Makbon bay.

In a different-subject verb sequence the subject of the prepositional verb refers to the zero-object of the main verb, as in (3).

(3) Aa-y-ei n-oosu man-ow
   DU-3PL.H-pull 3PL.NH-to seawards-3SM

   The two of them pulled them (=boats) to the sea.

Deictic directional marking is expressed through the verbs -aana (sg.) / -iiin (pl.) ‘to go’ and -aama (sg.) / -iiim (pl.) ‘to come’, as in (4) and (5). There is no intonational break between the two verbs.

(4) Miye po-solo p-aana le child 3S.NH-jump 3S.NH-go landwards

   The child jumped onto the land

(5) Nee-laagi m-aalim m-aama person-woman 3SF-go.up 3SF-come

   A woman went up in this direction.

Perfective aspect can be indicated by the verb -ein ‘to finish’, and may occur in combination with the clitic s indicating perfective. Verb sequences of this kind be may be of the type same subject (6) or different subject (7) and (8).

(6) Te-miye ow se p-aagi p-ein se
   1SG-child 3SM PERF 3S.NH-dead 3S.NH-finish PERF

   My child, it is already dead.

(7) M-ei kiiyouk p-ein ma-saak aliwe

   3PL.H-burry 3S.NH-finish: 3PL.H-to house

   After they had burried it, they went home.

For some further details on Moi, see Menick (1996). A more detailed description is still in preparation.

TEHIT

Ronald Hesse
Yayasan Betania Indonesia/Summer Institute of Linguistics

Tehit is spoken by approximately 12,000 people, who live mainly in the subdistricts of Teminanbuan and Sawiat, about 100 kilometers southeast of the district capital, Sorong, in the western part of the Bird’s Head peninsula of Papua (Irian Jaya). Tehit, together with Kalabra to the west and Moraid to the north, form the West Bird’s Head Stock, which when combined with Seget and Moi further to the west and north, comprise the West Bird’s Head Family, also known as the Toror language group (Voorhoeve 1975, Wurm and Hattori 1981, Silzer and Heikkinen 1984, Flassey 1991). Tehit is composed of eight major dialects: Jit, Mbol Fle, Saifi, Imiian, Sfa Riere, Fkar, Sawiat, and Salmeit (Flassey and Stokhof 1979), which exhibit extensive geographic lexical chaining. (This analysis for the Tehit general language group is mainly based on the Imany Tehit dialect.)

The inventory of Tehit phonemes includes nineteen consonants and four vowels. The stops include voiced and voiceless bilabial /p/, /b/, alveolar /t/, /d/, and back /q/, /g/ stops, along with their prenasalized counterparts. Continuants include bilabial and alveolar fricatives /f/, /s/, and the laryngeal /h/. The sonorants consist of the bilabial and alveolar nasals /m/, /n/, and two liquids, the lateral /l/ and flap /ɾ/. Tehit vowel phonemes are /i/, /e/, /a/, /o/. Orthographically, semivowels ’y’ and ’w’ are derived from corresponding high vowel phonemes /i/, /o/ depending on syllable structure.

Tehit has a maximal syllable template of CCVVC, but the majority of syllables are CV, followed in frequency by CVC. Onsets are obligatory everywhere except word-initially (e.g. o.mos ‘vine’). Complex onsets may only consist of a voiced stop (b, d, g) followed by a liquid (l, r), e.g. ta.bra ‘forest’. If a nucleus is complex, it takes the form of a rising diphthong IV, e.g. dli.en ‘ironwood’, or rarely the falling diphthong /au/, saun ‘mist’. Codas are restricted to liquids (l, r) word-externally, e.g. fol.li ‘overgrowth’. Word-finally, however, simple codas may consist of any non-laryngeal consonant (i.e. voiced stops and /h/ are excluded). Word-final complex codas take the form yC, e.g. hna.it ‘worm’. Consonant clusters not conforming to the above rules are broken up phonetically into short degenerate CV syllables with epenthized non-phonemic schwa, e.g. kromok (k.r.mok) ‘moss’. See for a more detailed phonological description, Hesse (1995).

All Tehit words have lexical stress. Stress in polysyllabic non-compound words is relegated to a single syllable, usually the penultimate, but word-ultimate stress is not uncommon. If a word contains a syllable having complex structure, whether due to a complex onset, nucleus or coda, then that syllable always carries the word stress. Degenerate syllables never carry stress and are restricted to pretonic position. Consequently, they are not found word-finally or in monosyllabic words.

Tehit is a SVO language with relatively simple morphology, almost entirely dedicated to the tracking of person-number-gender of referent nominals. This pronominal agreement is marked on a wide variety of word classes, including verbs, adjectives, possessives, quantifiers, inalienable nouns (partitives and kin terms), prepositions, relativizers, and even conjunctions. The agreement prefixes, made up of an efficient set of single-consonant phonetic signals, are invariant regardless of word class usage or referent case role:

(1) 1SG t-
     1INC f-
     1EXC m-
     2 n-
     3SF m-
3SM  w-
3PL  y-

As seen above, gender is manifest only in third person singular forms. First person plural explicitly includes or excludes the hearer. Ambiguity that results from homophous forms, m- for both ‘1EXC’ and ‘3SF’ and under-differentiation of number in the second person, is most often resolved either by the number of a suppletive root, or by anaphoric context. Plural is usually indicated by increased height in a suppletive root’s first vowel, see (2) and (3).

We:EXC  1EXC-sleep:PL  1EXC-at:PL  garden

Occasionally, a noun phrase will be marked with an agreement enclitic that draws from the same set given in (1). If the last word of a noun phrase ends in a vowel, that word may include an enclitic denoting the gender and number of the third person head noun, as in (4), (5) and (6).

The Abun language is spoken in the subdistricts of Sausapor and Mega, in the northern area of the Bird’s Head peninsula. It is bordered by several other languages: to the east, Amberbaken (also known as Mpur or Kebar); to the south, Karon Dori (also known as Mare, a dialect of Maybrat) and Moraid; and to the west, Moi.

There are approximately 3,500 Abun speakers who live in eighteen villages, eight on the coast and ten interior. The Abun language is spoken in the northern area of the Bird’s Head, as well as in isolated hamlets. There are four identifiable dialects all of which are mutually intelligible, although intelligibility decreases when greater geographic distance is involved. The names given to the dialects are those used by the speakers themselves and concern the variation in terms for the first person singular pronoun. So the dialects are referred to as Abun Tat (eastern), Abun Ye, Abun Ji, and Abun Tat (western).

Abun is the name given to the language by the people themselves, and often means ‘bush, jungle’. They call themselves the Yenden people, ye ‘person’ and nden ‘interior, land’. Sometimes they refer to the name of their language as Anden, but more commonly Abun. Rarely do they call themselves the Yembun people; rather they say that they, the Yenden people, speak the Abun language. The Abun language has been known by various names including Karon Pantai, Madik and Yimbun. The name Karon Pantai, as it is listed in Voorhoeve (1975:48), is the name given to the Abun speaking people by the Biak people. The Moi people to the west call them Madik, the meaning of which is uncertain. Voorhoeve (1975:48) listed the name Madik as a separate language for what has since been analysed as the Abun Ji dialect (Berry and Berry 1987). The Amberbaken to the east call them the Yimbun, or Yembun, a name which they obviously acquired from the Yenden themselves. The name Abun has now been introduced into linguistic literature by Silzer and Clouse 1991, Grimes 1992 and Berry and Berry 1999. Technically, it should be referred to as the Bun language, or Abun, but the people themselves insist that the Indonesian translation is bahasa Abun, not bahasa Bun.

The sound system of Abun is relatively simple and consists of 20 consonants, 5 simple vowels and seven diphthongs. Also there are three distinct tones, high/rising, low and falling. The inventory of phonemic consonants comprises plosives, including prenasalised voiced plosives at four points of articulation (with the exception of c, which is used in free variation with the palatal fricative sy), and nasals, fricatives and glides at three points of articulation. Voicing contrast for plosives is only found in the onset of stressed syllables. Thus, Abun has 20 consonants: p, b, t, d, j, k, g, mb, nd, nj, ngg, m, n, ny, f, s, sy, w, r, and y; five phonemic vowels, i, e, a, o, u, and seven complex syllable peaks (diphthongs): ai, au, ei, eu, oi, ou and ui.

Tone in Abun has a low functional load and may be disappearing as a useful contrastive feature. There are very few minimal pairs in the same word class. Tone is used to indicate unspecified number plurality, for example, tone is used to differ between the singular and plural forms of the third person pronoun, in which ‘3Pl.’ is /an/ with a rising tone, while ‘3SG’ is /an/ with a low tone. It also distinguishes re ‘this, here’ with a high pitch from the perative marker (PERF) re, which has a low pitch.

Abun has a basically monosyllabic word structure. A sampling of a typical story reveals that about 80% of the words are monosyllabic, about 15% have two syllables and only 5% have three or more.
Abun is an isolating language which makes little use of affixation in its grammatical system. Affixation is frequently a means whereby other languages indicate such things as tense, aspect and mood. Also affixation is often present to signify grammatical relations such as Subject, Object, Indirect Object etc. However, all affixation in Abun is derivational in nature and is mainly concerned with class changes. Therefore when it comes to grammatical relations or the variations of tense, aspect and mood to be found in Abun there are two key strategies which express these concepts: word order and particles.

The Abun language, like all languages of the West-Papuan Phylum has SUBJECT VERB OBJECT word order. This word order is inflexible, insofar as the position of an entity in relation to the verb will encode what its grammatical relation is. The grammatical relations of subject and object are encoded by word order alone, with the subject always that constituent which immediately precedes the verb, and if there is an object it will immediately follow the verb.

In Abun the constituent termed ‘mood’ is unmarked for the indicative and marked for other types. It is indicated by means of a clause final particle. One interesting feature of the mood particles is that in two instances, that of interrogative and indicative negative two particles may be used to indicate these moods. In Abun, the strategy of using two particles (as opposed to one) is mainly for the purpose of delineating the scope of the mood. Thus, in negated sentences the clause-final nde is always present, while the negation may be emphasized or focussed on a particular predicate by the particle yo, which is placed immediately preceding the predicate.

In Abun, concepts concerned with tense are carried by time words or phrases and sequential conjunctions. In the case of complex sentences there are two subordinate conjunctions which convey tense concepts. These two conjunctions are described as being ‘realis’, where a preceding clause refers to events already past, or ‘irrealis’, where a preceding clause refers to events that have not actually occurred, being either in future time or hypothetical.

Abun distinguishes between alienable and inalienable possession. Inalienable possession is used when referring to parts of the body, ‘whole-part’ relationships (such as ‘tree-leaf’, ‘bird-feathers’), but not when referring to kinship terms. Inalienable possession is unmarked. The word order of the phrase is: POSSESSOR + POSSESED. No form of marking whatever marks either possessor or possessed. When the possessor is indicated by a pronoun no distinctive possessive pronouns are used. Juxtaposition is sufficient to indicate the possessive relationship.

Alienable possession is used to describe all other possessive relationships. In these cases Abun uses the possessive word bi. It is not possible to say that bi marks either the possessor or the possessed in the possessive phrase. Bi joins the two as a linker (Croft 1990:28-32). Thus, the inalienable possessive phrase has the order of POSSESSOR + bi + POSSESSED.

The Abun language is classified as a Papuan language by Wurm (1982:206). It belongs to the small West Papuan Phylum. Wurm’s classification of Abun as a language of Papuan type seems to be based mainly on its lexical inventory, with special reference to its set of personal pronouns, belonging to Wurm’s set III (Wurm 1982:40). However, Abun has a number of Austronesian features. Most notable is the rigid word order of SUBJECT-VERB-OBJECT (SVO) as distinct from the Papuan SOV word order (Wurm 1982:64). Other significant Austronesian features include: a very simple derivational morphology; with very little inflectional affixation; the common use of particles where verb affixation would be used in Papuan languages; the use of prepositions instead of postpositions; no special sentence medial verbs; a decimal numbering system as compared to the Papuan binary, trinary or quinary systems, and the existence of reduplicated adverbs.

For a fuller description of Abun refer to Berry and Berry (1999).

MAYBRAT

Philomena Dol
Leiden University

Maybrat is a Papuan language which is spoken in the central area of the Bird’s Head. The total number of speakers is approximately 22,000 (Brown 1991:1). Maybrat has originally been classified as a family-level isolate of the West Papuan Phylum (Voorhoeve 1987a:717), but subsequent research has indicated that this classification may well be untenable (Reesink 1996). The name Maybrat is morphologically a compound noun, consisting of two members. The first is maw, a noun meaning ‘sound’. The second part, brat, seems to refer to the type of sound, in other words, the particular language variety. However, in isolation the form brat is unattested. The people who speak Maybrat refer to themselves as rae ro Maybrat, lit. ‘man REL ‘sound brat”’. Maybrat is spoken in six dialects, namely Maybrapah, Mayasmanun, karon, Maymare, Maymaru and Mayte. Speakers of these dialects all refer to themselves as rae ro Maybrat.

Previous work on Maybrat includes work by the anthropologists J.-E. Elmberg and H. Schoorl, and by the linguist B. Brown. Both Elmberg and Brown worked in the Ayamaru area, while Schoorl worked in the Atut area. A complete grammar in the form of a PhD thesis was completed in 1999 by the present author. Apart from a grammar and texts, this work also gives the background information and references on previous research on the Maybrat.

Maybrat has five vocalic phonemes, /ɪ, e, a, o, u/. In word-final position [i] and [w] occur as allophones of /ɪ/ and /u/ respectively. There are eleven consonantal phonemes: /p, t, k, m, n, l, s, r, w, y/. Sequences of consonants are invariably broken up by an epenthetic [a]. Monomorphemic words mostly consist of one or two syllable. Stress usually falls on the first syllable of a word, unless this syllable contains [a].

Verbs and inalienably possessed nouns (i.e. kinship terms, body parts and spatial nouns) receive an obligatory person prefix, which is coreferent with the subject of the clause or with the possessor of the noun. The phonological realisation of this prefix is determined by the form of the verb or noun: bisyllabic forms in which the first and the second syllable are C-initial receive a covert person prefix O-. All other forms receive an overt person prefix according to the following paradigm: t- ‘1SG’; p- ‘1PL’; n- ‘2SG and 2PL’; y- ‘3M’; m- ‘3U’. The unmarked prefix indicates third person singular feminine and third person plural. Gender is only distinguished on 3SG.

Demonstratives are morphologically complex: a demonstrative base -t- ‘very near’; -t- ‘near’ and -n- ‘far’ indicates distance from the point of view of the speaker, and prefixes mark specificity, attributive or adverbal use and, in some cases, the nature of what is described such as ‘area’ or ‘side’. Suffixes may indicate gender. Location markers and question words are partially derived from these demonstrative morphemes.

1 Research for this article was conducted under the auspices of ISIR (Irian Jaya Studies: a programme for interdisciplinary research, 1993-2000), a priority programme of NWO (Netherlands Organization for Scientific Research) which is financed by WOTRO (Netherlands Foundation for the Advancement of Tropical Research). The programme was carried out in cooperation with LIPI (Lembaga Ilmu Pengetahuan Indonesia). I wish to express my gratitude to Dr Hasan Aliwi, head of the Pusat Pembinaan dan Pengembangan Bahasa, for his willingness to be my sponsor.
Maybrat has four (and in some dialects five) unique terms for numbers. The rest is based on body-parts, which is a typically Papuan feature (Laycock (1975) and de Vries (1992; 1993)).

Word order is fairly rigidly SVO, and in the NP the adjective, numeral and demonstrative follow the head noun, in this order. In possessive constructions in which the possessed is an inalienable noun the order is possessor-possessed, whereas in the case of an alienable noun the word order is possessed-possessor, where the possessor is marked by ro, as illustrated in (1).

(1) Tfo ro-Yan y-atiya
    machete POS-Yan 3SM-father

Yan’s father’s knife.

The restrictive relative clause, which follows the head, is also marked by ro, as in (2).

(2) Eok ro m-hu amah m-aim po-it
    two REL 3U-stay house 3U-cook NOM-eat.PL

The two who stay home cook food.

Negation occurs by placing the negator fe in clause-final position. In ‘yes/no’ questions, the interrogative marker a is placed in sentence-final position. Content questions are formed with question words, which take the position of the constituent being questioned.

Syntactically, one of the most striking features of Maybrat are sequences of verbs, which can be classified into a number of different types of sequence. A problematic category are sequences which include verbs of position, motion, and which have shared arguments. These resemble coordinating constructions, but at the same time also seem similar to so-called ‘serial verb constructions’. An example is given as (3), see further Dol (1999).

The story below was written by Didimus Bame, a fifteen year-old boy who often helped to write out recorded Maybrat stories told by other people. At some point, Didimus said that he knew many Maybrat stories which his father had told him, and asked me if he could simply write out a few stories instead of recording them first. Eventually, other people also occasionally brought in written stories.

^2pi 'man' in this context refers to the father of the family, although pi is normally used to refer to a man in the general sense of the word, or to 'mister'.
^3-teh asah lit. 'feel shrimps' refers to fishing with hands. In the dry season shrimps (and also other fish) are manually fished out of the water by feeling and groping for them. In the free translations, -teh asah is translated as 'catch shrimps' or 'fish' to accommodate a more fluent translation.
^4suek means 'well' when used as a manner adverbial, and 'immediately' or 'straight away' when used as a temporal adverbial.
^5A few verbs, -ama 'go' is one of them, substitute the initial a by [a], when prefixed for first or second person plural. Similarly -ama 'come' in (7).
^6The prefix k- before a first person singular pronoun tuo is in some northern dialects used for emphasis. The author of this story, at the time a sixteen-year-old boy, grew up in Konya, 10 km to the north of Ayawasi.
You take it and come, I will fish with a rod in the river. fish and other things will bite like this, and we will cook food and we will have things to mix with it.

They listened and went and stood (in the river) and they caught these large amounts of shrimps.

They brought them and gave them to the man.

He went to fish with a rod in the river.

Night and day and then like this aaaaall the time.

Now, one time the man told them to go again like this, and catch shrimps.

When they went to fish, the man went too and fished with a rod.

"The expression po p-ka, lit. 'things we mix' is used to refer to fish, meat and vegetables which are used to mix with staple food such as taro, cassava and, nowadays, rice.

"The expression mi na[t] is adequately translated as 'night and day'.

"The adverb term 'continuously', here with a long vowel to mark emphasis, is a loan from Indonesian.

"This exclamation marks the beginning of a change in the story.
The woman with her child, the two went and fished.

The two fished for a long time, they caught many shrimps, until they saw they had a lot.

The two got up and filled (the shrimps) well into five dry bamboos.

Now this time when they were fishing, they felt like this and they found shrimps, real fish, crabs and things like this.

They selected (the fish) and they filled four bamboos, at the same time they filled the shrimps into a bamboo and so they had five bamboos.

They got up and they returned again and they immediately went to the ‘Buah Raja’ tree.

13 The modifier ira ‘just now’ linked to the head noun by the POS/REL marker ro indicates an item just mentioned. In this line and many following lines it is sufficiently implied by the English definite article, because a more explicit translation would only make it sound awkward.

14 This is a dialectal variant: in Ayawasi this particle appears as -re. The syntactic position of fi-ra in this context is also strange: one would expect the manner adverb fi-t-o ‘similar.to.near-U’ to occur following m-teh to express ‘they felt like this’.

15 sua ati ‘real fish’ refers to all kinds of fish that do not include shrimps and crabs.

16 The occurrence of the adverb si twice in this sentence expresses simultaneity of the events described in each clause which si follows (Dol 1999:266).

17 In Indonesian ara na is ‘Buah Raja’, an edible fruit.

¹⁸ a is an interjection that expresses hesitation by the speaker. Dol (1999:138).
¹⁹ In the sequence akah u, u intensifies the meaning of akah. Dol (1999:131).
²₀ komando is a loanword from Indonesian.
²¹ The demonstrative form fo can either be an attributive demonstrative meaning 'this' (also expressed as re-f-o, where re is an attributive demonstrative prefix), or it can mark the beginning of an action, here called 'INCEPTive' (Dol 1999:107, 178).
The woman ordered and ordered and the child cooked the bamboos until they were all done.

The woman saw it was done and she immediately ordered the child to take the fish with the bamboo.

She took it and gave it to her up on the side in the tree, she stayed above in the tree, she was eating (there).

The child took this fish with three bamboos, she took them and gave them to the woman, and she said that the other two bamboos should stay here (i.e. on the ground with the child).

It was not allowed, and then the woman said: hey! She was angry, and she said: No!

25The function of reduplication is to intensify the meaning of a word, adding an element of randomness (Dol 1999:63).
26It is unclear why the negator fe is used twice in this sentence. Possibly this creates extra emphasis.
27Normally the form -apo refers to eating meat, while -tah is used to refer to eating small meat or, as in this case, fish. Possibly here -apo is used because large amounts of fish are eaten.

Then the man answered saying: If the child goes to cut a raincape, like this she tells (me) so that I know.

\(^{29}\) raincapes are made from pandanus leaves. They are also used as mats to sleep on.

\(^{30}\) It is unclear why here is used while in line 43, which is parallel in syntactic structure and meaning is absent.

\(^{31}\) The form ko, which here together with -haf 'stomach' refers to 'anger', is derived from -ako 'not want'. In Maybrat, many forms expressing emotion are formed in this way, e.g. t-haf fri 'I feel for', lit. '1SG-stomach.meet'.

Mpur is a Non-Austronesian tone language with ca. 5000 speakers in Kebar and Amberbaken (North-East Bird's Head of West Papua). These geographical names are sometimes used in the literature to indicate the Mpur language. For a brief description of Mpur morphology, the reader is referred to Odé (forthcoming). The lexicon is of Non-Austronesian origin, but many loans entered the language from Numforesen, Irianese Malay, Standard Indonesian and some also from Dutch. Mpur morphology and syntax show Austronesian features (Reesink 1998:603ff.), such as subject-verb-object word order and the absence of heavy verb morphology. The following brief survey of Mpur phonology and morphology presents some features that are relevant for understanding the interlinearized text below.

Mpur phonology is described by Kalmbacher (1996). The language has five vowel phonemes /i/, /e/, /a/, /o/, /u/, and twelve consonant phonemes: plosives /p/, /b/, /t/, /d/, /k/; fricatives /f/, /s/, /y/; nasals /m/, /n/; semivowels /w/, /y/. Nasals can be syllabic. Consonant elision on morpheme boundaries, vowel elision between consonants and semivowel insertion between vowels is a frequent phenomenon.

Mpur has four lexical tone contrasts: high, midrising, mid/midfalling and low, indicated on vowels and syllabic nasals with the marks ˊˋˋˊ, respectively. Examples are: wọp 'masses.of.water', wọp 'resin', wọp 'k.o.palm', wọp 'harden.of.sago'. A final description of tones and intonation is still in progress; a discussion about the experimental-phonetic analysis of tones and intonation in Mpur can be found in Odé (1996; 1997a,b; 1998).

There are free and bound pronouns; bound pronouns are subject markers prefixed on verbs (1) and on inalienable nouns (2).

(1) A-jap beraw do-musim do-f(j)-rokir

On verbs, subject prefixation is obligatory with human subjects, except with (mj)nant 'child' and mamir 'person', unless gender is stressed. The word order in verbal clauses is SVO. A verbaliser bi- can be used to change loans or words from other word classes into a verb: bi-tutup VB-close 'close', bi-sik 'VB-be.unable' from sik 'not.possible'. In sequences, verbs are obligatorily inflected, as in (3):

1Research for this article was conducted under the auspices of ISIR (Irian Jaya Studies: a programme for interdisciplinary research, 1993-2000), a priority programme of NWO (Netherlands Organization for Scientific Research) which is financed by WOTRO (Netherlands Foundation for the Advancement of Tropical Research). The programme is carried out in cooperation with LIPI (Lembaga Ilmu Pengetahuan Indonesia). I wish to express my gratitude to Dr Hasan Alwi, head of the Pusat Pembinaan dan Pengembangan Bahasa, for his willingness to be my sponsor.

2Note that in a number of cases classifiers are required in combination with numerals.
(3) De-jap de-frur de-tar bain.
   3PL-live 3PL-make 3PL-possess garden

They live and work in their garden.

Verbs are not inflected for the marking of Tense-Mood-Aspect. A general question-marking particle –e indicates the interrogative (4) in clauses without question word; the imperative mood is expressed by the second person, sometimes followed by the clause-final demonstrative ka (5); the prohibitive is expressed by jan 'not' (6).

(4) An-un si jan-e?
   2SG-go to house-QM

Are you going home?

(5) Nen-dokwa njep na nen-kapet! Jan! An-dokwa ka!
   2PL-carry firewood for 2PL-cut no 2SG-carry that

(6) An-wandar jan!
   2SG-shame not

Don’t be ashamed!

Alienable nouns are possessed with the possessive pronouns –tar and –bi (de-tar jan 3PL-POS house ‘their house’) and inalienable nouns by means of bound pronouns (n-prek 3SF-foot ‘her feet’). The noun bar ‘thing’ occurs frequently with other nouns or as nominaliser with words from other word classes: bar(r)-bwa thing-leaf ‘vegetables’, bar(r)-kotot thing-laugh ‘funny’. Nouns referring to human beings and names are marked for gender: nton-a child-3SM ‘boy’, Flora-n Flora-3SF ‘Flora’.

Adjectives follow the noun and can be further specified with the relative marker ma (iw mafun bird beautiful ‘a beautiful bird’ vs iw ma mafun ‘the bird that is beautiful’). In predications, adjectives can occur as verb and take subject prefixation: a-umfrum 3SM-yellow ‘he looks yellow’. Adjectives such as kwaiik ‘strong, hard’ can also be used as adverbs: de-jap kwaiik 3PL-sit strong ‘they are firmly seated’.

Some spatial prepositions have an aspectual meaning with verbs of motion as illustrated in (7-9). Ku ‘to, in, at’ may be prefixed with a-, which I have glossed as ‘3SM’.

(7) In-aw si Manokwar.
   1SG-go.home to Manokwari

I go home to Manokwari.

(8) An-un ma Anja.
   3SM-go to Anjai

He has gone to Anjai (and is there now).

(9) Saji n-un ku Anja.
   once 1SG-go to Anjai

Once I have been to Anjai.
In this brief survey of Mpur morphology only a few words can be said about the deictic system, which requires extensive research since it is not very well understood yet. Spatial deictics are expressed by the basic demonstratives ki ‘here/this’, ka ‘there/that’ and mek ‘over there’. The demonstratives occur with the prefix morpheme n-, probably ‘3SF’ and, if used attributively, with relative pronoun ma and *n-‘3SF’ as shown in the following examples:

(10) Aka dawaw det bain ma-n-ki.
    and.then pig eat garden REL-3SF-this

And then the pig will eat up this garden.

(11) A-mim bapu ma Amtur a-na-mek.
    3SM-arrive far.away at Amtur 3SM-come-there

He arrived far away at (the river) Amtur there.

The anaphoric ta and focus/topic marking ni indicate textual deictics. They are shown in examples (12, 13):

(12) A-wot ka nton ni tut nton mafun mim.
    3SM-see that child FOC because child beautiful so

He looked after that child because it was so beautiful.

(13) Aka n-jat a-ta kin.
    and.then 3SF-wound 3SM-ANA healthy

And then her wound was cured.

The anaphoric elements can be prefixed by *a- ‘3SM?’ and *ba[r?] ‘thing?’: a-ta, ba-ta, ba-ni. My consultant insisted that in the forms with *a-, initial b- is omitted and that it comes from bar ‘thing’. They may be combined with the demonstrative ki ‘this’ and ka ‘that’.

In narrative texts, the conjunctions min-ta-ki like-ANA-this, min-ta-(a)re like-ANA-so and some other combinations with *min- ‘like-’ with the meaning ‘having arrived at this point, things were like that’ (in short: ‘like that’), occur very frequently in clause-initial as well as clause-final position. Finally, an interesting feature in Mpur is the frequent occurrence of clitics, which function in discourse as interrogative, continuation, focus, temporal marker, vocative, and as the expression of emotive emphasis (see also Odé 1997a; 1998). Though some clitics, like interrogative clitic –e and clitic –o in enumerations, have a clear meaning of their own, it is not easy to explain differences between the clitics. I will gloss all of them as CL.

The text for this contribution is told in the coastal dialect of Saukorem, Amberbaken, in which for example Mpur wóp ‘masses.of.water’ is realized as op. Notational conventions, apart from the abbreviations listed at the beginning of this volume, are the following. Semivowel insertion between vowels is indicated by Y; vowels and consonants that are not pronounced are presented in parentheses. Stem-initial /d/ preceded by a prefix ending in a vowel is pronounced as [r]; this may also occur in connected speech if a preceding word ends in a vowel. In the text I spelled according to the actual pronunciation of /d/ as [d] or as [r]. Likewise I followed in the spelling the actual pronunciation of word-initial /n/ before bilabials as [m], of word-initial /b/ as [w, β] in for instance the deictic elements (a)bata and bani and in bar ‘thing’ and of word-initial /p/ which is sometimes pronounced as [w, b, β].

1 Literally parrap means ‘suddenly beginning to convulse’. Note that in Numfor the verb sapararer means ‘to convulse (of a dying animal), to flounder’. It was suggested by my consultant to translate it as ‘suddenly’.

*The more common pronunciation of bajur is bajar from bar-jar ‘thing-evil.spirit’, a word also used in Amberbaken to indicate the watergod, better known as Wop, lit.: ‘mass.of.water, lake’ in Kebar, but also in Amberbaken (cf. Miedema 1984: 174, 233ff.). Because of the different pronunciations of initial /w/ and /b/, I am not sure whether here the word wartar from war-jar ‘water-fluid’ is meant. Bajur was originally translated as ‘heavy rain causing flood that washes away people’. The common word for a flood is war-(d)at ‘water-to.flood’. See also note 6.
Rainclouds hid the mountains.

Somewhat later there was rain, then thunder, then lightning.

Finally it was like masses of water that washed everything away.

(It) brought heavy rain causing a flood.

So the child that just stabbed the pig, the pig that they just roasted and that got up to run away, run continually till the top of the mountain Birwaw.

It arrived at (mountain) Sinka (near Imbuan).

The people who lived there in Sinka drowned.

\(^5\)In contrast to the usual pronunciation of non-initial /d/ as [r], the speaker clearly pronounces [d]. This is said to be common in the Saukorem area, where, in contrast, initial /d/ can also be pronounced as [r].

\(^6\)Op or wop means ‘mass.of.water, lake’, but is also the name of the watergod Wop or Wuob as it is spelled and described by Miedema (1984:174ff.). See also note 4.

MEYAH

Gilles Gravelle
SIL Indonesia

The Meyah language is spoken by approximately 20,000 people. They live in traditional villages and government Desa along the coastal plains of the Northeast Bird’s Head peninsula of Irian Jaya, including sections of the Ambon peninsula in Manokwari, and in the northern and southern slopes of the Arfak mountains. Other names and spellings that have been used for Meyah are: Mansibaber (Wirz 1923), Meah, Meax and Meakh (Grimes 1984). The current spelling of Meyah is according to the orthography proposed by Gravelle (1990 and 1991). Meyah is classified as a Papuan language and part of the East Bird’s Head Phylum (Voorhoeve 1977).

Although there are several local varieties of Meyah spoken within the regions defined above, the only distinct dialect is Moskona. There are approximately 8,000 Moskona living on the lower slopes of the southern Arfak mountains. Meyah and Moskona have a 90% cognacy and a nearly identical grammar and phonology. However vast differences in the pronunciation of words makes the two dialects mutually unintelligible (Gravelle 1999). The name Meyah is most likely derived from the Mpur (Kebar) word ma-ye ‘those who are outside’ (Odé 1999). Meyah and Moskona speakers do not generally refer to themselves by those respective names. They are a clan oriented society therefore what they consider to be their clan name and language name is often synonymous. Meyah shows close genetic relations with its Soubg neighbor, and has a cognacy rate of about 30% with Soubg (Reesink 1996). The Hatam and Mpur languages that border Meyah to the southeast and west respectively, are more distant with a cognacy rate of about 5%.

The inventory of Meyah phonemes includes fourteen consonants and five vowels: b/, t/d, c/j, k/g, /m/ and /n/. There is no voiceless bilabial stop /p/. The fricatives include bilabial /f/, /s/ and velar /x/ with occasional lenition to /h/. Flap /r/ and the lateral /l/ freely vary in all environments. Meyah vowel phonemes are /i, e, a, o, u/. The vowel /e/ is a front open-mid vowel. Diphthongs are /ei/, /ai/, /ou/ and /au/. Epenthetic semi-vowels /y/ and /w/ are used intervocically as in: efey ‘wet’ and okowu ‘debt’. Vowel sequences include /iel/, /ial/, /ual/, /uil/ and /uol/ as in: ebiedi ‘relate’, ariawun ‘medicine’, rua ‘they’, oduis ‘stab’, juomu ‘third’. Meyah is a pitch accent language using two phonemic pitch levels [+High] and [-High]. In polysyllabic words only one syllable carries the distinguishing pitch accent. The placement of accent is not predictable: e géné / ef ‘hear’ / ef ‘smell’, mős ‘rain’ / mós ‘frog’ (Gravelle 2000).

The Meyah grammatical system is not highly complex, but it does have a greater number of verbal inflections than its East Bird’s Head neighbors. Meyah is a SVO language with person-number agreement on possessed nouns and verbs. Alienable nouns are generally marked by the fossilized alienable noun class marker m- as in: mek ‘pig’, meg ‘tree’, mod ‘house’. Adjectives and inalienable noun stems can function as predicates in that they can take the same person-number, aspect, and mode inflections that verb stems take and can be negated by sentence final negative guru ‘not’: di-en-eteb [dineeteb] guru ‘1SG-DUR-large not’ (I am not big). Adjectival stems function attributively following noun heads. However, verbs do not function attributively.

Meyah does have a rather complex morphophonemic system involving coalescence between prefix vowels and stem vowels. The prefixes indicating person-number, aspect, mode, and instrument are all (CV) structures. Meyah verb, adjective, and inalienable nouns stems have an initial vowel limited to /e, a, o/. When a person-number prefix is attached to one of these stems, its final vowel coalesces with a front or back vowel [-Low] of the stem or intervening prefix. The resulting vowel then becomes [+High Front] or [+High Back] as in (1-2).

The vowel -a is dominant and does not coalesce. Therefore, if the stem vowel is -a, the prefix vowel is elided, and if the prefix vowel is a-, then the stem vowel is elided as in (3).

The time of an event is indicated through the use of temporal adverbs that usually occur initially in the sentence as in (4), but can occur at the end. Meyah uses a three term system for demonstrative and spatial deixis. The deictic stems are prefixed by nominalizer ke- or adverbializer si- as in (7).

\[ \begin{align*}
\text{ke-if} & \quad \text{[kef]} \quad \text{‘this’} \quad \text{si-if} \quad \text{[siʃ]} \quad \text{‘here’} \\

\text{ke-unj} & \quad \text{[konj]} \quad \text{‘that yonder’} \quad \text{si-unj} \quad \text{[sunj]} \quad \text{‘there yonder’}
\end{align*} \]

The uninfl ected stems in (7) function as clitics attaching to nouns or prepositions such as:

(8) a.
\[ \begin{align*}
\text{orka meic-if} & \quad \text{eker} \quad \text{gij mod-uma} \\ \text{bring ladle-this sit in house-that} & \\ b.

\[ \begin{align*}

\text{descend-here go to-there} &
\end{align*} \]
S/he descends here. S/he goes there.

Meyah locative deictic constructions include demonstrative and locative adverb stems that denote elevational orientation to the deictic center such as:

\[(9) \quad \text{ke-imba} \quad \text{this below} \quad \text{si-imba} \quad \text{there below} \]

Movement toward or away from the deictic center is indicated by en ‘come’ and eja ‘go’, as in (10). When these stems function adverbially they remain unmarked as 3SG.

\(^{4}\)The comitative 'gonu' is only used when coordinating dual human nouns.

\(^{6}\)In its usage here, efej ‘dry’ also refers to the lower area of a river. The term oforga ‘headwater’ can also refer to the upper area of a river. These two terms help to define the elevational position of a village in relation to the deictic center, hence many human names include the terms efej or oforga such as: Meyekiba Ofogra 'upper Meyekiba' and Meyekiba Efej 'lower Meyekiba.' Also, nearly all mountain villages are on a river, therefore it can be assumed that the name of the village is also the name of the river, even if the term mei 'water/river' is left implicit in the text.

SOUGB

Ger P. Reesink
Leiden University

Sougob is spoken by approximately 12,000 speakers, living between the Anggi lakes in the north and the Bintuni Bay as the southern border. Their western neighbours are the speakers of Moskona, a dialect of Meyah. To the east, along the Cenderawasih Bay, the Austronesian language Wamesa (dialect of Wandamen) borders on the Sougb.

In earlier publications, the language is known by the exonyms Mantine, the dialect variant near Bintuni, and Manikion, the variant near the Anggi lakes (Cowan 1953:10-11; see also Voorhoeve 1975: 50 and Silzer and Heikkinen 1991:62). The western lake is called Anggi giji and the eastern Anggi gida. The forms giji and gida are Sougb for ‘male’ and ‘female’ respectively. No specific meaning for Anggi is known. A short grammar sketch is given in Reesink (2000). Three major dialects are distinguished: Sougb misen, roughly equivalent to what used to be called Manikion, Bohon, spoken along the coast, south of Oransbari, and Lou, equivalent to what was known as Mantion. Differences between these three dialects are claimed to be minor. A fourth, rather divergent, dialect is Sre or cicir, spoken by a small group of people near the mouth of the Tembuni river.

Some anthropological data, including Sougb migration patterns, are given in Pouwer (1958), Pans (1960) and Haenen (1998). In 1996 a New Testament was published in the Sougb misen dialect by the Indonesian Bible Society.

The language is closely related to Meyah, as demonstrated in Reesink (2000a). Both languages have five phonemic vowels /i, e, a, â, u/, represented by i, e, a, o, and u, and have the restriction that all verb stems have an initial vowel, which cannot be [+ HIGH], so that verbs can only begin with e, o, or a. Sougb does not have a voicing distinction for the stops of four points of articulation: bilabial p~b, alveolar t~d, palatal c~j, and velar k~g, even though the orthography, as employed in the New Testament, suggests such a distinction. There are three fricatives, bilabial $, represented by f, alveolar s, and laryngeal h, two phonemic nasals, bilabial m and alveolar n, and one liquid, with free variation between [r] and [l], both of which are used in the orthography. Four vowel sequences have been attested: ei, ou, ai and au. Sougb has a pitch-accent system with two levels of tone, yielding a number of minimal pairs, such as mòg ‘thorn, sharp’ and mòg ‘flesh’. On polysyllabic words, only the stressed syllable is specified for a certain tone.

A distinctive feature of the language is a word-final labio-velar consonant, written as gb, as in the name of the language. This is analyzed as a velar stop, whose rounding is caused by the preceding high back vowel.

Verbs and inalienable nouns, the latter include items with initial i or u, are prefixed to indicate person and number of subject and possessor, respectively. Third person singular is zero on verbs and m(Ð) on nouns, lowering high stem vowels: ind-uMs ‘1SG-ear’, m-oms ‘3SG-ear’; ab-ir ‘2SG-voice’, m-er ‘3SG-voice’. There is an inclusive-exclusive opposition for first person plural and dual. The dual is marked by the vowel a, for all persons. Verbs can further be prefixed by em- for irrealis (IRR), and a- for instrument. The irrealis is obligatory on verbs in negated clauses, as in (1). Main verbs in clauses which are introduced by a sequential conjunction appear to prefer the irrealis marking, as in (107)-(109) of the text.

The programme was carried out in cooperation with LIPI (Lembaga Ilmu Pengetahuan Indonesia). I wish to express my gratitude to Dr Hasan Alwi, head of the Pusat Pembinaan dan Pengembangan Bahasa, for his willingness to be my sponsor.

(1) Em-em-es ugwodi ingm(a) ero
    1EXC-IRR-shoot cuscus some not

    We did not shoot any cuscus.

Instruments cannot be expressed as clausal constituents. They are given in a preceding clause or extra-clausal constituent, and then marked by the verbal prefix a- which substitutes the stem vowel e of the verb etkwa ‘cut up’ in (2) or the initial o of the vowel sequence ou in the verb ouma ‘buy’ in (3).

(2) En eic kepta a-(e)tkwa hweij
    3SG take machete INS-cut.up pig

    He takes a machete (to) cut up the pig.

(3) Len l-o-ho besa l-a-(o)uma minc
    they 3PL-carry bird.of.paradise 3PL-INS-buy cloth

    They carry birds-of-paradise (to) buy (ceremonial) cloths with them.

A few physiological states are expressed through experiential verbs, in which some noun functions as a third person subject and the experiencer is marked by an object suffix to the generic verb eb(a) ‘do’. Some examples are: dukuri-ebe-d ‘I am cold’; mus-ebe-b ‘you have a cold (are coughing)’; cicir-ebe-m ‘we are sleepy’; s(l)r-ebe-r ‘they are hungry’. The irrealis marking is placed between the subject noun and the verb, as in (4).

(4) Dani ar-em-ebe-d-ero
    I thing-IRR-do-1SG-not

    I am not sick

The nominalizing clitic g- is used to make nouns out of verbs or adjectives, as in the title of the New Testament Allah m-en g-os dou menau ‘God 3SG-possess NOM-hold for new’ in which the verb + preposition os dou ‘hold for’ means ‘to promise’ is nominalized. It can also be encliticized to words like the generic noun ara ‘(some)thing, what’ or free pronouns len ‘they’ and ren ‘you.PL’. areg is used to introduce relative clauses, as in (5), while the pronouns convey ‘those who’, ‘you who’, as exemplified in (158) of the text.

(5) Minc are-g dan ind-ina eic dou dan cloth what-REL.I 1SG-father take to me

    kaba dan d-a-(o)u/g dan in-sowa then 1 1SG-INS-pay 1 1SG-wife

    The cloth which my father gave me I used to buy my wife.

Quite a number of verbs appear to contain a nominalized element, as in acgeic ‘to request’, in which g-eic ‘NOM-take’ seems to be a grammaticalized incorporated form of the verb ‘to take’, which means ‘give’ when occurring with the preposition *dou ‘to’, as in (5). The form *ac could be the Instrument prefix *a- plus *ec, which seems to have a very generic meaning ‘movement forwards’, as it has the following specific meanings: with high tone: ‘sneeze, peel (banana), open (door), light (a fire), shoot’; with a low tone: ‘walk, pick (fruit). Obviously, this is still rather speculative.

Less speculative is the presence of this nominalizing clitic on the demonstratives, which seem to specify the cardinal directions, two of which have clearly elevational meanings: *gada ‘that up, west’, *guih ‘that down, east’, *giba ‘that north’, and *gac ‘that south’. These four are in complementary distribution with *gini ‘this’ and *ingga ‘that’.

As has become clear from the examples, Soughb, just as most other Papuan languages of the Bird’s Head has a rather strict SVO word order in the clause. The negative adverb is always sentence-finally, requiring the verbs in its scope to be marked by the prefix *em- for irrealis. For further details, the reader is referred to Reesink (2000a).

³Mesra eb-sa 'hand does-at' is a euphemism for the vulgar term okwi 'fuck'.
But Dobrorosasabo gave her body just a little to Aigaisim.

And she gave her body completely to Geiraduhwi.

Then he said to her thus:

This evening then you trick him for me.

Then Doboro said to him, (to) Aigaisim, she said: Aigaisim.

(The actual words of the last clause are: [...] Dan doy-ai mis tous ‘...me like-it true only’, which were substituted during the transcription by ainyes ‘openly’).

During the transcription dou-t was given as dou dan ‘to me’, replacing a clitic by a full pronoun.

Most likely the linking a on the second instance of the name signals that this is a vocative in the direct quote, (19)-(20), of what Doboro said to her husband who was to be killed by her lover Geiraduhwi.

⁸Lines 22-23 are not very clear. During the transcription it was explained as ‘the two of them went to cut a kind of bamboo until eight o’clock’, but the form [hiraga in line (25) is given as ‘follow’ or ‘go along’ a certain path. It could be that my consultant explained what the two were going to do based upon his knowledge of the story, rather than explaining the words actually used.

⁹The form legeic is not clearly articulated. It could be the name of wood, which was used to hit, or a form of the verb -eic ‘take’.
Who killed my husband?

Who killed my husband?

Who killed my husband, for my husband is our slave.

So then, she ran away but, Dod said to her like: Don't run away because you have betrayed him to the men so they've killed him.

So Dod, in the morning she kept running there,

3PL-say like 2SG-thing just.now say like yes yes

They said like: Your thing from just now, here it is. (She) said: Yes, yes.

14 The second line of this sentence is not quite clear, as far as the identification of the morphemes is concerned; the general meaning is as indicated, based upon the explanation in Indonesian.

15 The exact morphemes of greganggin are not certain: graga is explained as 'the one just now' which is followed by what seems to be the nominalized form inggin 'this one', used in presentative constructions. The generic ab-arra 'your-something' is explained as a euphemism for 'penis'.
That which was recently, my older brothers' thing is this, yes, yes. This is it. (Implying; this is the penis of my older brothers that I liked only yesterday, now I have to pay for my adultery.)

Then they pulled her down all the way to the river.

near an enormous bolder, the hole of the tree-kangaroo.

Then Dod bemoaned (her sister-in-law): Hole of the Isim, trough of the Isim, you folded the fishing hook, you folded the trumpet.10

Dod was wailing like that.

because of the one who had just fucked her younger brothers.

So that's why Dod cried like that.

They pulled her all the way, and cut her up in the river.

Then old man that Sabok? Sabokrinya.

10The Isim is a typical limestone river, disappearing under the ground in a kind of trough, whose shape easily calls up the image of a vagina. The word *mui ‘fishhook’ is said to have a second meaning ‘issue of adultery’. It would seem that the ‘hook’ and the ‘fluit, trumpet’ are metaphors for the retribution of a case of adultery. The sentence was explained in rather general terms: “You invited the problem of adultery.”
Then the old man, Sabokrinya (= Dod's husband = Duhuhwej's brother-in-law).

Lines (77)-(81) are explained as figurative speech referring to Sabokrinya’s desire to be taken to kill Arougwasabo and Uwasasabo. Sabokrinya’s mother is Deihwi. His wife is Dod. He wants to take a sickness from his mother to kill Doboro’s brothers. He is saying that many people are afraid to do this, they skirt the mountains, only he and his brother Duhuhwej have enough courage to take revenge for the adultery committed by Doboro.

17The combination of ehi ‘fell’ and mer ‘sound’ is the expression for ‘to sing’; the verb oho ‘carry’ appears to be reduplicated with the second instance nominalized: oho-g-oho ‘carry-NOM-carry’ conveying a intensification.
18Meb Dinaha is explained as the name of a bald mountain; and goufu means ‘white’, presumably referring to the limestone rock. The preposition naugh ‘for, in order to’ can be prefixed with dei- indicating some emphasis, here it seems to imply ‘in order to take possession of certain places.'

Bui is a hook, a standard on which bags or clothes can be hung; this short phraes is explained as: he is the center for paying off the case of adultery.

During the transcription geisongada was ignored and the name of Demdaga was substituted (another name for the same person?), who would be paid for with Mahauhweij as a sougub ‘slave’. Notice that the verb ‘pay’ is ouhw or metathesized to ohu.

sudgwa and adga are both kinds of mats, used for sleeping and as raincases. Mahauhweij seems to imply that his family ties, and the brideprice involved, are still intact.
They shot Demdaga deso and are carrying him this way.\(^{23}\)

And they've killed Arougwasasabo and Uwasasabo and they've cut up Dobroro too.

And (the old man) got angry.

Then my grandfather Duhuhwei went, they talked to my grandfather for a long time, and he prepared something fresh to pay.

He gave them Kain timur close to a hundred pieces.\(^{24}\)

And as for Kain toba, a big one.

The red cloth, the kain cita a large one.

Yes, he paid. He paid to my father (and) Beigahani closed the issue\(^{25}\).

\(^{23}\)This line suggests that Mahuhwei is actually another name for Demdaga(deso), resolving the rather confusing string of events in the lines (90)-(90).

\(^{24}\)Kain timur is the generic Indonesian term for pieces of valuable cloth, used to make payments as brideprice, fines for social transgressions like adultery, murder, etc. Some specific types are more expensive, called kain toba and kain cita, as mentioned in the following lines.

(114) L-em-ehi lo gini terim deb #

²⁷The verb amuhung means ‘to cover’ and mogb is a cooking pot. The expression is a metaphor for ‘solving a perkara ‘litigation’.
²⁰As a comment on these lines, it was stated that Duhuhweij paid Beigahani all these kain timur as compensation for the death of Demdaga-deso; the verb edi ‘hurl’ is explained as a metaphor for ‘to buy’.
²⁷The final clause was ‘corrected’ during the transcription to read l-em-ebe-buka naugb l-em-ehi ‘they opened (= settled) in order to fell’.
²⁸The IRRRealis marking in (112)-(114), even though the events being referred to took place in the past and were quite real and certain, is due to the rule that second clauses in sequences involving conjunctions such as naugb ‘for’ are always marked with *em-‘IRR’.
They felled (= cultivated) the area, they worked for a long time and then he ordered that they go and bring eh, then *Inyomus domuro*29 also came.

Sanamendoumog the two of them came. (That is to say, Inyomus of line (115) and Sanamendoumog came together.

After that Sogora also came.

After that they all. eh, then, Doumeissira (= name of a woman) also came and he said: You go bring your mothers from Ulait and Ducbo also already.

They went and brought Doumeissira's husband Sabokrinya from Dusaducho also.

He said: come and let's go of the Kofo bay (= south end of Anggi giji lake). So they left the female relatives separate at Sisgadouwo. (i.e. just to the north of Sururei.)

In other words, the Sough families living along the Anggi lakes are like the many parasitic plants on a large raintree, with Jonathan’s grandfather Duhuhweij being the trunk, as stated in the next line.

^[31] See for the order of settlers, according to the narrator, line (152).

^[32] Lobum was corrected to ligbum during the transcription, which means ‘other people’. The implication of arei ‘to trick’ is that they had discovered this place before other people had a chance.

\textsuperscript{33}Notice that the plural marker -\textit{er} is absent, while the verb is prefixed for plural third person.

\textsuperscript{34}Apparently, a pig species is named \textit{minyak tanah} 'oil'. Possibly, this refers to an indigenous species, while mandor pig, see line (135), is a recently introduced species.

\textsuperscript{35}The term \textit{mani} 'oil' is from Biak.

\textsuperscript{36}Mandor could refer to Indonesian \textit{mandur} 'foreman, overseer'; presumably a larger species than the \textit{mani cinogo} of line (131).

\textsuperscript{37}The form \textit{menenau} is a reduplication of \textit{menau} 'new'.
Yes, and, Don’t bring all kinds of new pigs here, for we already raise the ‘earth oil’ and that’s already good.

\textsuperscript{38}The numbers are not quite clear: first, the narrator makes a mistake with ‘twelve’, corrected to ‘37’ which is made up of sud hom jer-ai nagama edisu: sud hom ‘one man’ = ‘twenty’ and jer-ai nagama edisu = ‘seventeen’, thus, ‘thirty seven’. But the second number was translated as ‘forty three’, whereas according to the Sough numbering system this should read: two men plus eighteen = ‘fifty eight’, which is indeed the last verse of chapter fifteen.

\textsuperscript{39}The actual morphemes and their meanings of the expression ‘I love you’ are not quite clear: ind-u ‘1SG-thought’ and ind-uwa ‘1SG-behavior’ is known from other contexts, but g-ehi ‘NOM-fell’ is a wild guess; During the transcription ind-uwei gehi yen was given with the meaning ‘I love you’; In 1 Kor. 15:58 the concept of ‘love’ is expressed with dan in-doc gororoug yeni ‘1SG-front pure you’; -doc gororough is Sough for the organ ‘heart’; see further for expressions of emotion, Reesink (2000b).
