A DESCRIPTIVE GRAMMAR OF LOLO¹

Fu Maoji
Jesus College
Cambridge University

PREFACE

In the spring of 1938, with the transfer of the University of Peking to Yunnan, I came into contact with the Lolo people and became interested in their language. Since that time I have travelled in some of the other provinces bordering Yunnan in order to study other dialects of Lolo. The description which follows is based upon the dialect of Pei-shan which is situated in the Hsi-ch'ang district of Sikang, but I have endeavoured as far as I am able to compare this dialect with others which I have studied at first hand or that have been described by other scholars.

As many dialects still remain to be studied in a scientific manner and the phonetic structure of Lolo words in general has degenerated to a considerable degree, I cannot undertake an etymological study of the language in this work. Although I have tried to arrange my material according to modern phonetic and linguistic science I can lay no claim to completeness. I have no doubt that further studies will improve and correct this first sketch.

I cannot express sufficient gratitude to Professor G. Haloun under whose supervision this dissertation was written. He has read the whole work in manuscript and has offered many valuable suggestions and much acute criticism as to both arrangement of the material and the analysis of the language structure. Without his encouragement I should probably never have undertaken this task; and without his help the work would not have achieved its present form.

I owe sincere thanks to Professor W. Simon and Mr. R. A. D. Forrest for some suggestions incorporated in this work; to Mr. A. R. Davis who read through the manuscript and made sensitive suggestions. Grateful thanks are due to Mr. R. Y. Jennings and Dr. L. E. R. Picken of Jesus College for the encouragement they have given me and the facilities with which they have provided me. To Dr. Picken, I in fact owe my introduction to Cambridge and thus, in large measure, my opportunity for this work.

¹ Submitted for the Ph.D. degree at Cambridge University, August 1950.

I am deeply indebted to the British Council for awarding me a scholarship which enabled me to come and stay in this country; to Huachung University for releasing me from my duties for the past two years; and to the Board of Research Studies for financial assistance in the production of this dissertation. Finally, I take this opportunity of thanking my Lolo informants and all those who have given me their aid in my field work in various Lolo regions.

M. C. Fu
August, 1950
CONTENTS

PREFACE ............................................................................................................. 1

ABBREVIATIONS ............................................................................................. 5

INTRODUCTION ................................................................................................. 7
  I. Names for the Lolo ....................................................................................... 7
     (1) Some Common Names Used Today ....................................................... 7
     (2) Former Names ..................................................................................... 9
  II. Distribution of the Lolo-Speaking Peoples ............................................. 11
     (1) Distribution According to Tribes ....................................................... 11
     (2) Number of Lolo Speakers .................................................................. 21
  III. Ethnological and Linguistic Affinities .................................................. 23
       (1) Ethnological Affinities ..................................................................... 23
       (2) Linguistic Affinities ......................................................................... 25
  IV. Inscriptions and Manuscripts in the Lolo Script ..................................... 27
      (1) Inscriptions ...................................................................................... 27
      (2) Manuscripts ..................................................................................... 28
  V. History of Research on Lolo ..................................................................... 33
     (1) European .......................................................................................... 33
     (2) Chinese ............................................................................................. 37

GRAMMAR .......................................................................................................... 41
  I. Definition of Material and Comparison of the Dialects ......................... 41
     (1) Definition of Language Material Used .............................................. 41
     (2) Comparison of the Dialects Described .............................................. 43
  II. Phonetics .................................................................................................... 48
     (1) Consonants ....................................................................................... 48
     (2) Vowels .............................................................................................. 56
     (3) Tones .................................................................................................. 61
     (4) Stress .................................................................................................. 63
     (5) Construction of Syllables .................................................................. 64
     (6) Sounds of the Chinese Loanwords .................................................... 65
     (7) Other Dialects and Some Correspondences ..................................... 66
  III. The Written Characters ......................................................................... 75
     (1) Direction of Writing .......................................................................... 75
     (2) The Origin of the Script ..................................................................... 79
     (3) The Relation between the Lolo and Other Scripts ............................. 80
(4) The Construction of the Lolo Characters .............................. 81
(5) The Relation between the Written Characters and the Spoken Words ....................................................... 85
(6) Punctuation Marks and Signs of Repetition ...................... 87

IV. Parts of Speech .......................................................... 91
(1) Substantives .............................................................. 91
(2) Pronouns ................................................................. 97
(3) Adjectives ............................................................... 109
(4) Verbs ................................................................. 116
(5) Adverbs ................................................................. 131
(6) Numerals ............................................................... 136
(7) Numeratives and Counting Units ................................. 140
(8) Interjections ........................................................... 147

V. Word-Formation ........................................................... 149
(1) Compound Words ...................................................... 149
(2) Derivatives ........................................................... 154
(3) Formulas for the Structure of Words ............................ 156

VI. Syntax: General ........................................................... 159
(1) Grammatical Relation of Words ................................. 159
(2) Sentences ............................................................... 167
   i. Classes of sentences according to structure .................. 167
   ii. Classes of sentences distinguished by mood ............... 179

VII. Syntax: Special .......................................................... 187
(1) Relation between Substantives ................................. 187
(2) Relation between Pronouns ...................................... 189
(3) Relation between Verbs ............................................ 189
(4) Relation between Adjectives .................................... 190
(5) Relation between Numerals ...................................... 191
(6) Relation between Adverbs ........................................ 192
(7) Relation of Substantives and Pronouns to Adjectives and Numeratives ................................... 192
(8) Relation of Verbs and Adjectives to Adverbs ............... 193
(9) Relation of Substantives and Substantive
   Equivalents to Verbs ............................................... 193
(10) Negation .............................................................. 198
(11) Comparison .......................................................... 201
(12) Syntax in Other Dialects ....................................... 204

APPENDIX: The Yi Syllabary .............................................. 211

BIBLIOGRAPHY ............................................................. 227
ABBREVIATIONS

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Abbreviation</th>
<th>Description</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>A.</td>
<td>Annam</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>AP</td>
<td>adverbial particle</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>B.</td>
<td>Burma</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>C.</td>
<td>Cambodia</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>c.</td>
<td>chüan (the Chinese term for chapter)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>H.</td>
<td>Hê-chang (Kwei-chow)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>K.</td>
<td>Kweichow</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>L.</td>
<td>Lu-nan (Yunnan)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Lc.</td>
<td>Lu-ch‘üan (Yunnan)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lit.</td>
<td>literally</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>NUM</td>
<td>numerative</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>OP</td>
<td>object particle</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>PD</td>
<td>particle expressing duration</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>PP</td>
<td>particle expressing past tense</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>PRT</td>
<td>particle</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>S.</td>
<td>Sikang</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Si.</td>
<td>Siam</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>SP</td>
<td>subject particle</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>STP</td>
<td>substantivizing particle</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sz.</td>
<td>Szechwan</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>T.</td>
<td>Ta-ting (Yunnan)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>t.</td>
<td>tome</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>voc.</td>
<td>vocabulary</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Y.</td>
<td>Yunnan</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Underlined numbers (e.g. 169) refer to items in the Bibliography (pp. 227 ff., below).
INTRODUCTION

CHAPTER I

NAMES FOR THE LOLO

1. Some Common Names Used Today.

A. Lolo.

1. The term Lolo is generally applied by both the Chinese and Europeans to the peoples who speak a particular language found in southwestern China and extending to northern and eastern Burma and Tongking. The speakers of this language, except those who call themselves Lolop'o, dislike this term.

For the origin of the term "Lolo", there have been four suggestions, viz., that it derives from

(a) the tribal designation no: P. Vial suggested in 1898 that because in some regions the Chinese confuse the n and l sounds, they have rendered no, which the Lolos call themselves, as lo and through the doubling of this syllable the term has become Lolo (187, p.70);

(b) a Chinese word for 'basket': C.E. Hicks maintained in 1910 that "Lolo" is a contemptuous nickname given by the Chinese because of the small basket called lolo in Chinese, in which the Lolos keep the bamboo tubes which symbolize their ancestral spirits (93, p.217);

(c) a name of a Lolo tribe: In 1913 A. Liétard proposed that the name of a particular tribe, the Lolo(p'o), was used by the Chinese to designate the Lolo peoples as a whole (127, p. 23);

(d) the tribal name Lulu: T'ien Ju-ch'êng writing in 1557 (176, p. 88) declared that "Lolo" is a corruption of Lulu (盧廬) The author of the Album of the Miaotzü (18, p. 272), Ku Yen-wu (105, cc. 109, 111), T'an Ts'uei (167), Yan Shên (158, p. 165), F. S. A. Bourne (16, p. 88), T. de Lacouperie (102, p. 89), P. Pelliot (148, p. 137), M. A. Vissière (189, p. 178) support this idea.

Of these four suggestions, the second is the least likely because the people of one of the Lolo-speaking tribes call themselves "Lolo(p'o)"; the first is possible but unlikely because no Lolo tribes call themselves "nono"; I am inclined to combine the third and fourth and I would propose that "Lolo" is a term by which a tribe of Lolo-speaking peoples call themselves and that this same tribe was called "Lulu" in the T'ang Dynasty.

B. No-su and Ni or Gni.

2. The Lolos have, besides Lolo(p'o), many other names which they have given themselves and which vary from region to region. The most widely used is No-su which is pronounced Ne-su, Na-su and Naou-su in different regions. The first syllable (no, ne, etc.) in all these terms means ‘black’, while the last is a particle used to turn the preceding verb or adjectival into a substantive. The term No-su and its variations (Ne-su, Na-su, etc.), therefore, mean ‘black ones’ or ‘black men’.

3. The history of the term No-su is rather interesting. While travelling in the Ta-lian Mountains in 1943, I procured a Lolo manuscript entitled The Origin of the Gods in which there is a passage running thus:

‘In ancient times there were three families of white persons living on earth. But in heaven there lived three families of black persons...’

The manuscript goes on to relate the descent of these black persons to earth and how they married on earth and became ancestors of the Black Loños (69:8-21).

Whether this myth was originally composed to support the superiority of the “Black” Loños, or whether their superiority is the natural result of the myth is unclear, but in Sikang, Szechwan and some regions of Yunnan and Kweichow, the Loños are distinguished into two main classes. The ruling class is called no ‘black’, and the lower, tc‘y ‘white’. It would appear that originally the term “No-su” applied only to the “Black” Loños. But as it was customary to refer to the conquered by the name of the conqueror and in the course of time more and more White Loños were conquered by the Black Loños, the term “No-su” has come to include the White Loños as well.

4. The Lolo speakers in Sikang and Szechwan also refer to themselves as Ni ([a] below) and those in Lu-nan (Yunnan) call themselves Gni ([b] below):

\[
\begin{align*}
\text{(a)} & \quad \text{Ni} \\
\text{(b)} & \quad \text{Gni} \end{align*}
\]

Ni and Gni are obviously of the same origin but their meaning is not known. A. Liétard suggested ([127], p. 31, f.n.) in 1913 that Ni might mean ‘browner skin’ as opposed to the Lolo term for the Chinese (go) which might mean ‘whiter skin’, but Liétard produced no better reason in support of his thesis than his own assertion that ni means ‘impure’ and go denotes ‘pure’. In fact, in the regions to which Liétard referred, the word for ‘impure’ is not ni but bo-a-go or ku-a-tsg and the word for ‘pure’ is bo-go or go which is different from the word for the Chinese, go. The Ni or Gni is probably connected with No (see § 2). The former might be an older form of the latter because it is now used only in compound words or in the written language.

C. Man-tzü, I-jên, etc.

5. The Lolo-speaking peoples are also referred to as Man-tzü, Man-chia, I-jên, I-chia, I-chiao, I-pien, or sometimes Miao-tzü. In Chinese Man and I both mean ‘barbarians’ or ‘aborigines’, tzü is a substantive suffix, jên means